The following Veto Message from the Mayor, was read, to wit

"Mayor's Office

San Diego, Cal. March 29-1890

To the Board of Delegates:

I have the honor to return herewith, without my approval, Ordinance No- "Establishing a City Pound for estrays, and creating the office of Pound Keeper," etc. etc.

The second section of this Ordinance is in conflict with the provisions of the Charter. It creates the office of Pound Keeper, and vests the appointment of said officer in the Mayor, subject to the confirmation of the Board of Delegates.

Sec. 1- Chap. 2, Art. 2, of the Charter, provides that "Subject to the provisions, limitations, and restrictions in this Charter contained, the Common Council shall have power to pass Ordinances [sub-division 23] to provide a public pound and pound-keeper" etc, etc.

Sec. 7. Chap 1, Art 3, provides that "The Mayor shall appoint all officers whose election or appointment is not otherwise specially provided for in this Charter or by law."

The power of the Common Council ends with the creation of the office. The Charter devolves upon the Mayor the duty of making the appointment, and it does not require such appointment to be confirmed.

Aside from the foregoing objection, I think that the Ordinance is too sweeping in its provisions. Its prohibitions and penalties extend over the entire area of 74 square miles embraced within the municipal boundaries. It is not questioned that residents who undertake the expense and labor of planting trees, shrubbery and flowers around their homes, and who in their way add to the beauty and attractiveness of the City are entitled to protection from the mischief caused by roving animals. But it does not seem reasonable to apply to the sparsely settled suburban sections the strict regulations needful within the limits of the city proper. Beyond these limits there are numerous families cultivating little garden patches, and keeping a little stock, and to many of these people their cow is a very considerable part of their support. There are several thousand acres of pueblo land covered with abundant grass during three or four months in the year, and no one can be injured by permitting the cattle to graze upon it. Nor can I see any reason why the great area of unimproved Park land, and other pueblo land belonging to the City, should be shut against the poor man's cow. If there should be any trespass upon private property in this large outside region, the owner will have a sufficient remedy under the provisions of the general trespass law of the State.

It appears to me to be entirely practicable to frame an Ordinance that will afford adequate protection within reasonable limits, without working hardships upon dwellers in the remote suburban districts.

I shall be glad to approve such an Ordinance.

Respectfully

Douglas Gunn, Mayor."

Thompson Delegates Heath gave notice for reconsideration in accordance with Sec. 17, Art 2, Chap 1, (Powers Common Council) of the Charter.
