

PAINTED UTILITY BOXES IN SAN DIEGO

While the City of San Diego Commission for Arts and Culture does not administer the painted utility box programs, we receive many inquiries about them. Most of the programs are administered by business improvement organizations. Please contact the following organizations directly to learn more.

Uptown Partnership

Uptown Partnership's Utility Art Box Program harnesses the creativity of volunteer artists to create an urban art trail throughout the Hillcrest and Mission Hills neighborhoods that improves sidewalk aesthetics, promotes culture, and discourages vandalism.

City of Vista Public Arts Commission- "Vista in Bloom"

The City of Vista Public Arts Commission sponsors a city-wide utility box beautification project called "Vista in Bloom". The project celebrates community pride and involves the painting of designated utility boxes in the downtown Vista area.
