FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Citizens donate to Police Foundation in support of canine crime fighters

SAN DIEGO – Individuals, organizations and local businesses contributing to the San Diego Police Foundation have funded more than 20 police dogs since 2004. "Jake" is one of the Foundation's gifts.

Police dogs' primary function is officer protection. They respond to crimes in progress citywide and usually serve until they are about eight and a half years old. They spend 40 hours a week working alongside their Canine Unit officer, and go home with them each evening.

The bond between canine handler and dog, and the work they do, is crime fighting that everyone understands.

Generous individuals like Craig and Rebecca Irving and Robert and Marjorie Beck and San Diego businesses like Donovan's Steak & Chop House have contributed more than $9,000 each to keep the Canine Unit at full force.

Each year, five to ten canines reach retirement age and settle in to full-time life at home. And that's where the San Diego Police Foundation comes in: Citizens who love working dogs make sure a new dog is always ready.

Beyond K9, Foundation President and CEO Wenda Alvarez says contributions to the Foundation have put more than $2.3 million in law-enforcement assets to work.

If you can help, or if you'd like to attend a future K-9 Unit demonstration, contact SDPF at (858) 453-5060 or www.sdpolicefoundation.org.
