San Diego's Spike In Hate Crimes Against Asian Americans Mirrors National Trend

San Diego County has not been spared from the nationwide spike in racist attacks against members of Asian and Pacific Islander communities during the pandemic, records reviewed by KPBS show.

In 2020, the San Diego County District Attorney's Office filed charges in three cases of hate crimes against Asian Americans and has documented several other racist incidents. Also in 2020, the California-based advocacy organization Stop AAPI Hate collected 29 reports of racist incidents against Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders in San Diego County.

Aired 3/5/21 on KPBS News
Listen to this story by Claire Trageser.

The three alleged hate crimes in 2020 is “three more than we’ve had in the last couple years,” said District Attorney Summer Stephan. “That’s what’s disturbing, is we weren’t seeing that type of hate crime directed toward our Asian community until COVID in 2020.”

In May 2020, Stephan’s office set up a hotline where people could call or make online reports of hate crimes and racist incidents. She said they received 110 reports to the hotline, and 10 were reports about incidents directed toward people of Asian descent.

However, Stephan did not file hate crime charges in one high-profile incident in February in which a man allegedly punched an elderly Filipino woman on the trolley. Instead, her office charged the man with elder abuse, which drew the ire of community advocates.

Stephan defended the decision, saying there wasn't enough evidence for a hate crime charge.

"What happened is atrocious, but for it to be a hate crime, you have to show motivated bias against a protected group, race, gender, sexual orientation, religion, or disability," she said. "We pursued looking for hate crime intent, and it doesn't mean it was not there, but we have to look for provable evidence."

Stephan said most of the 2020 reports don't meet the strict legal definition of hate crimes, but they help her office prosecute other crimes.

"There's at least one incident where someone reported something that's less than a crime, but as we were able to do open source intelligence investigations, cyber investigations, we were able to see that this person was preparing for violence, they were amassing weapons and we were able to work with law enforcement to interrupt that cycle of violence," she said.

The 29 San Diego County incidents reported to Stop AAPI Hate mirror a national trend toward more hate crimes and racist incidents against Asian Americans. The group's records show 2,808 firsthand accounts of anti-Asian hate from 47 states and the District of Columbia between the middle of March 2020, when the pandemic set in, and the end of December.

"The trends are horrific," said Russel Jeung, a professor in San Francisco State University's Asian-American Studies Department who co-founded the Stop AAPI Hate group. "The attacks were pretty traumatizing, because it's unexpected that adults would bully others, that they would use such racial slurs and epithets."

He said attacks seem to only be escalating.

"Where they actually push and shove the elderly and actually kill them," he said. "It's scary for me to see how hateful America has become or maybe has always been."

However, Jeung said, the group did not collect the reports because they want increased criminal prosecutions. Instead, they are collecting evidence in the hopes that it will lead to changing civil rights policies to better protect Asian Americans and restorative justice programs.

"Restorative justice doesn't criminalize the perpetrator, but tries to educate him or her and tries to restore the relationship between the perpetrator and the victim," he said.

Community outreach

Among the group's efforts have been what they call "Chinatown strolls" in San Francisco and

Oakland, where people go visit businesses, which are meant to create a sense of community safety.

“We don’t need more patrols or more policing or more surveillance, we need more people to create a welcoming and safe environment,” Jeung said.

San Diego City Councilman Chris Cate did something similar in the Convoy area during the start of the pandemic.

“We wanted to showcase the AAPI community, and to show support that it was OK, you can continue to visit your favorite restaurants and businesses,” Cate said.

Cate’s office has also received reports of racist incidents. They include “instances where someone was at a restaurant or gas station and was told go back to your country, go home, you don’t belong here,” he said.

Stephan said hate crimes must be pursued vigorously because they tear the fabric of communities in all corners of the county.

“It doesn’t just affect that person, but when there are reports of a hate incident, it affects the whole community,” she said. “My husband and kids are Asian American, and every time we hear about an incident, it’s as if it happened to our own family.”

Local hospitals explain why they asked for waivers to expand nurses’ workloads during a COVID-19 surge. Meanwhile, San Diego’s spike in hate crimes against Asian Americans mirrors a national trend. ... Read more →

There has been a wave of recent attacks on elderly Asian-Americans throughout the country

By: Melissa Mecija

SAN DIEGO (KGTV) -- An elderly Filipino woman was the victim of an unprovoked attack on a San Diego trolley last Monday, multiple sources told ABC 10News.

Sources said a man punched her for seemingly no reason at all. Witnesses helped her report it to police. She was treated at a local hospital.

Recent Stories from 10news.com

San Diego Police said Tuesday that a suspect was arrested last week for assault with a deadly weapon with an elder abuse enhancement. Police say the incident is not considered a hate crime and was an isolated event.

35-year-old James Winslow is currently in custody, police confirmed. He is being held on $100,000 bail.

Lt. Matthew Botkin gave credit to the community for their help with the case. “They saw what happened, intervened, helped the victim call SDPD, waited with her until we arrived and continued their assistance by being helpful with the case. It was really a best case scenario response for our department and the community,” Botkin said.

“My first reaction is angry and then I was just sad for her,” said JoAnn Fields, a community advocate and director of the Filipino Resource Center.

Community advocate JoAnn Fields said she has noticed an increase in incidents since the start of the pandemic. “The previous president calling the coronavirus the Chinese virus... that just amplified, I believe, hate toward our community,” Fields said.

Attacks on elderly Asian Americans have been caught on video in recent weeks. 84-year-old Vicha Ratanapakdee, a native of Thailand, was on a morning walk in the San Francisco area when he was tackled. His head slammed the pavement. Ratanapakdee later died.

“To see this trend, awful trend, happening throughout the United States should put us on alert,” Fields said.

The group Stop AAPI Hate started tracking anti-Asian hate nationwide beginning in mid-March. It recorded more than 2,800 accounts by the end of 2020.

In San Diego County, the District Attorney’s office has three anti-Asian hate crime cases currently open. There were none in 2018 and 2019.

“It makes me very angry seeing how ignorant people are,” said Kent, a former Uber driver. He did not want to use his last name.

ADVERTISEMENT

While picking up passengers in the Convoy area March of last year, he said the passengers immediately started poking fun of the coronavirus and his Hong Kong background. Kent remained mostly quiet during the ride when the passengers said he could let them out if he wanted. Kent said the passengers then gave him a one-star rating.

He no longer is a ride-share driver. “I stopped because of the pandemic and also I’m afraid something like this would happen again,” Kent said. “That incident was only verbal. What if I get attacked next time?”

Opinion: A year into the pandemic, Asian Pacific Islanders still face racism and xenophobia. It must end.

FEB. 12, 2021 3:19 PM PT

Lee is the co-chair of the San Diego Asian Pacific Islander (API) Coalition and executive director of Pacific Arts Movement (presenter of the San Diego Asian Film Festival), and lives in Mira Mesa.

The Asian Pacific Islander (API) community commemorated Lunar New Year on Friday, almost one year after the United States reported its first case of COVID-19 community transmission. Yet long before the pandemic's inevitable spread, API communities were already dealing with another insidious disease — racism and xenophobia.

As early as January 2020, reports surfaced of small businesses facing declining patronage and individuals across the country being victims of hate as the novel coronavirus began to spread globally. Fueled by the former president's penchant for applying labels rather than applying strategic solutions, the uptick in anti-API sentiment was documented by the national Stop AAPI Hate campaign — which saw 1,497 reported incidents in its first four weeks of existence.

San Diego was certainly not immune to either disease. As our hospitals began to see the initial strain of COVID-19's spread, API communities were reporting incidents ranging from verbal harassment to the racially charged Zoom bombing of an SDSU student group to threats of physical violence against a 65-year-old mother, her daughter and granddaughter.

We provide this platform for community commentary free of charge. Thank you to all the Union-Tribune subscribers whose support makes our journalism possible. If you are not a subscriber, please consider becoming one today.

Alarmed by incidents both locally and nationally, the San Diego Asian Pacific Islander Coalition was formed — drawing more than 70 organizations for an initial joint statement denouncing API hatred. Shortly thereafter, the coalition helped craft a San Diego City Council resolution, put forward by then-Council President Georgette Gomez and Councilmember Monica Montgomery, condemning anti-API sentiments while encouraging additional city action. The coalition also advocated for an Asian Pacific Islander-representative seat on the county's newly re-established Human Relations Commission.

Despite all that has been accomplished thus far, our true work as a coalition and as a community has just begun. We have much work left to do.

Today, nearly one year into the pandemic, we again face an alarming increase in anti-API sentiment, including numerous recently documented attacks on the elderly. These latest acts of hate and cowardice are especially heartbreaking. No communities should have to protect their seniors from violence. No communities should have to offer their elderly self-defense classes just to walk down the street or to shop at their local store. Or any other basic human rights.

ADVERTISEMENT

Even as we react to these incidents with horror, it is important to consider that for each act of hate captured and shared on video or social media, there are likely dozens, if not hundreds more, that remain unreported.

In San Diego, advocates have called for more disaggregated data to show the disparate impact of COVID-19 on multiple fronts, including a focus on the toll on Filipino frontline healthcare workers and communities. In general, the lack of publicly collected data means the extent of anti-API racism and xenophobia here in our communities remains largely unknown.

What is clear, however, is that while the new year brings renewed hope in fighting the pandemic, racism and xenophobia remain largely unabated and unchecked. Especially following the U.S. Capitol insurrection on Jan. 6, we can now see that hate has established new footing, impacting far more than just Asian Pacific Islander communities.

As a result, the San Diego API Coalition has begun 2021 assessing where API voices are necessary to contribute to the overall well-being of the region. Whether it is a result of the model minority myth or the diasporic nature of immigrant API communities, we often remain invisible and overlooked. Although the API community is often perceived as silent, we now speak collectively to challenge anti-API sentiment.

ADVERTISEMENT

Given the lack of API representation in locally elected offices, among elected staffs, and even on boards and commissions throughout the region, we must step up and speak for ourselves rather than depend on others to call attention to — and to address — our collective issues.

Now, as much as ever, representation matters.

The San Diego API Coalition was formed to foster stronger collaboration, communication and advocacy in one of the most diverse demographic communities in the San Diego region. Collectively, we seek not only to uplift API voices but to also strengthen our work in solidarity with numerous marginalized communities — many for which the pandemic has only exacerbated existing economic and health access disparities.

Now we ask the San Diego community as a whole to take action. Let us call out hate in all forms — wherever we see it. Encourage victims to report their experiences and demand data that reflects the depth of the pandemic’s impact. Support minority- and immigrant-owned businesses who have suffered disproportionately throughout the pandemic.

ADVERTISEMENT

Only by working together can we build a stronger, more compassionate and more inclusive San Diego. Only together can we begin to develop “herd immunity” against racism and xenophobia.

Stop AAPI Hate

Since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, acts of violence against Asian, Asian American, and Pacific Islander communities are on the rise, both locally and nationally.

If you have experienced or witnessed an act of hate as a result of COVID-19, please report the incident to the Stop AAPI Hate Reporting Center (<http://www.asianpacificpolicyandplanningcouncil.org/stop-aapi-hate/>).

On June 2, 2020, the San Diego City Council adopted resolution  R-313068 (<http://www.sandiego.gov/sites/default/files/r-313068.pdf>), denouncing xenophobia and anti-Asian racism arising due to fears of the COVID-19 pandemic and affirming the City of San Diego's commitment to the well-being and safety of Asian Pacific Islander (API) communities.

The resolution affirms the following 10 points:

1. The City denounces xenophobia and anti-API sentiment and condemns harmful rhetoric and racist acts arising due to the fears of the COVID-19 pandemic.
2. The City joins cities, counties, and states across the country in affirming its commitment to safety and well-being of citizens, non-citizens and visitors with ancestry from the Asia Pacific region and in combating racist acts targeting APIs.
3. The City Council encourages the City to partner with community-based organizations, advocacy groups, as well as other appropriate officials and agencies across the county, to protect API residents and victims of discrimination and to curb hate acts related to COVID-19 for other groups, including, but not limited to, Black, Latinx, Indigenous, Muslim, Jewish, and LGBTQIA communities, and people with disabilities.
4. The City Council recommends that City staff link the Stop AAPI Hate reporting center on the City's website to join the national effort of documenting and combating anti-API discrimination.
5. The City Council encourages the City to partner with the County of San Diego, healthcare providers and community-based organizations to educate the public on mental health services for those who have been traumatized or otherwise stigmatized by anti-API hate.
6. The City Council encourages City staff to work with the San Diego Human Relations Commission in documenting and investigating incidents of anti-API racism and promote respect for all residents in businesses and public areas.
7. The City Council encourages City Departments to ensure that all information, such as public health information and emergency and disaster relief resources, is disseminated effectively to Limited English Proficient (LEP) communities.

Feedback

8. The City Council encourages City Departments to ensure that eligible minority-owned and disadvantaged small businesses have fair access to the City's resources, such as the Small Business Relief Fund, and can be directed to language assistance where needed.
9. The City Council urges the City to partner with community-based organizations to highlight API stories and uplift the contributions of API-owned businesses and API-led organizations.

Memorandum for the City of San Diego's Human Relations Commission

As a follow-up to the June 2020 resolution adopted by City Council (R-313068), the San Diego Asian Pacific Islander Coalition recommends the following actions to be taken by the Human Relations Commission:

1. Promote wider usage of national hate incidents reporting tool (stopaapihate.org) and local community resource list (pacarts.org/sdapicoalition/api-resources) - especially among the elderly and multilingual communities. (in addition to #4 in resolution)
2. Increase API representation on HRC and across other city boards and commissions by collaborating with API-led organizations to identify and prepare candidates.
3. Ensure city's language access plan is up to date with API languages, interpreters and resources. (#7 in resolution)
4. Examine rates of API access to city's small business relief and development programs and partner with organizations such as the Asian Business Association to increase access among API small business owners. (#8 in resolution)
5. Partner with the City's Office of Race & Equity, CBOs, cultural institutions, the Mayor's Asian Pacific Islander Advisory Board, and K-12 schools on:
 - Bystander/upstander trainings;
 - Asian Pacific American Heritage Month celebrations;
 - Educational initiatives to uplift Asian American history and stories(#9 in resolution)
6. Collaborate with the City's Immigrant Affairs Manager and community stakeholders to implement the Welcoming San Diego strategic plan, especially recommendations on inclusive access, public safety and civic engagement.

This memo is written by Kent Lee (kent@pacarts.org) & Samuel Tsoi (worldview@gmail.com) of the San Diego API Coalition (sdapicoalition.org) for discussion at the April 21, 2021 public meeting of the Human Relations Commission.

March 8, 2021

Shana Hazan
San Diego Human Relations Commission
1200 Third Ave.
Suite 916
San Diego, CA 92101

Dear Ms. Hazan,

With the alarming trend of hate and intimidation directed against our AAPI neighbors since the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, and especially the spike in violence against elderly AAPI citizens around California and the U.S. since the Jan. 6th insurrection at the Capitol, I'd like to ask the commission to increase its outreach to our local AAPI communities and related organizations throughout the city.

Just as my neighbors and I in Mira Mesa are increasing our vigilance regarding anti-Asian violence and intimidation, I want to ensure the city is increasing its vigilance too. I'd like to suggest the commission consider a series of hearings on the epidemic of anti-Asian hate as soon as it's safe to gather at city libraries and recreation centers for a thorough airing of local, and potentially unreported, incidents from neighborhood leaders and stakeholders.

Similarly, I'd like to propose that the commission invite police, fire personnel, and other public safety services to be part of the dialogue to not only discuss specific hate incidents, but to consider the potential for cultural misunderstandings that may arise from language barriers or incomplete communication, which could discourage some elderly AAPI neighbors from reporting a hate-related, violent, or intimidating incident.

As bad as the attack was on an elderly Filipino woman aboard the San Diego Trolley last month, there may have been dozens of additional incidents of hate, violence, and intimidation over the last year that have affected our AAPI neighbors and gone unreported, or unnoticed except by those involved. Stop AAPI Hate recorded over two dozen incidents of anti-Asian hate throughout the county in 2020 alone.

This is an opportunity for the city, and the commission, to enable a forum on this important matter, and an opportunity for neighbors, policymakers, and city officials to discuss solutions as we maintain vigilance. Please let me know how I can assist in any of these efforts. Thank you for your kind consideration.

Sincerely,

As one of the region's largest employers, the City of San Diego has a combined Fiscal Year 2021 operating and capital budget of approximately $4.0 billion and employs approximately 11,800 highly dedicated employees. Additional information about the City of San Diego can be obtained on the City's website: www.sandiego.gov.

Incorporated in 1850, San Diego is a charter city under a Strong Mayor form of government. The Mayor is the chief executive officer of the City, with the duty to oversee the administrative affairs of the City. The Mayor proposes the City budget, appoints City department heads, and has veto authority over most legislative and budgetary matters. The nine-member City Council has legislative authority in the City, including approving the City's annual budget, adopting local laws, and setting public policy. The Mayor is elected by voters citywide, while Councilmembers are elected by those voters living in the district served by each Councilmember. The Mayor and Councilmembers serve four-year terms and are limited to two consecutive terms.

THE DEPARTMENT:

2. Create a city-wide racial equity action plan that encompasses equity tools and provides a blueprint of systems and structures for each department to operationalize equity. The equity tool will be a proactive marker to be used to identify clear and measurable outcomes while identifying the benefit or burden of decisions made by City leaders and strive to implement city-wide inclusion.
3. Advise/coach and hold departments accountable for using the equity tool to identify issues of systemic racism, evaluate department policies and procedures and provide training on operationalizing equity to eliminate systemic racism.
4. In conjunction with the Equal Opportunity Contracting Program and the Citizens Equal Opportunity Commission, work to increase opportunities for women-owned, minority-owned, disadvantaged-owned, and disadvantaged veteran-owned businesses in City contracting.
5. Coordinate with City boards and commissions working on equity, racial justice and law enforcement issues, including the Human Relations Commission, the Community Review Board on Police Practices and the Citizens Advisory Board on Police/Community Relations to solicit community input and recommendations for meeting the City's goals of achieving race equity and eliminating systemic racism.

Mayor Gloria's Empowerment Policy Plan for San Diego's Black Community

ABOUT THE PLAN

I'm pleased to present to you my "Empowerment Policy Plan for San Diego's Black Community." For too long, deep-rooted systemic errors have existed within our nation's framework. This has created a historical documentation of how our Black communities have been left disenfranchised and disregarded. As Mayor, I intend to change that.

This plan serves as a framework for how we intend to tackle some of our Black community's most pressing issues. With the help of my Black Advisory Group and the public, we are ensuring that San Diego is a truly inclusive city for all people. This means rectifying wrongs, listening to the Black community and creating solutions that will establish and sustain our Black community for generations to come.

Todd Gloria

ECONOMICS

For far too long the Black community has been denied access to opportunity and economic justice. The City of San Diego will work to advance a more just and equitable economy by developing and implementing pathways for the Black community to be successful. This means that collectively, we should do everything we can to support economic mobility in the Black community. This includes everything from investing in the infrastructure in the neighborhoods that support Black-owned businesses, to ensuring that workforce development programs are connecting the Black community to high-paying and high-growth jobs. It is our responsibility to commit to racial equity and work to correct these systemic inequities impacting the Black community.

Ending homelessness is a moral imperative and is one of my top civic priorities. This is not acceptable. With leadership from the City and strong regional coordination, the City of San Diego will work with other agencies and service providers will keep San Diegans experiencing homelessness safe, offer services compassionately, and transition as many as possible into permanent supportive housing. The best strategy to ending chronic homelessness is to prevent people from losing their homes in the first place. During the COVID-19 pandemic, and in the recovery afterwards, keeping people safely housed is a top priority. In the first 100 days of my administration, the City of San Diego put a moratorium on evictions due to COVID-19 and jumpstarted an $83 million rent relief program for struggling tenants. However, we must do more to produce more affordable housing so more that just the wealthy can afford to live and work in San Diego.

Implement aggressive Housing First strategy (ONGOING)

Coordinate/leverage regional funds, including MHSA dollars (SHORT TERM)

Implement City's Homelessness Strategic Plan (ONGOING)

POLICE REFORM

While San Diego is one of the safest big cities in the United States, we still have more work to do to ensure that all people feel safe in their communities. This is especially true for the Black community. The City of San Diego must do more to build trust between the San Diego Police Department and the Black community so we can realize a community policing model that is safe, fair, and effective. In order to build this trust, the City must make a concerted effort to be accountable to the community, transparent in our decision-making, and open to dialogues that are difficult, but necessary. This means that we should do everything from revisiting our internal policies, training offerings, and hiring practices, to exploring big systemic changes to pretext stops, gang injunctions, and alternatives to police response. These reforms are no easy task, but they are worth our time and effort to ensure we keep the Black community safe.

ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE

Climate change impacts us all, but the most disparate of impacts are felt by communities of color. Many of these communities experience a lack of infrastructure such as, deficient park acreage, unimproved streets lacking pedestrian and bicycle improvements, and insufficient street lighting. This has caused communities like the Black community to be more susceptible to the impacts of climate change because the infrastructure and facilities needed to adapt are either inadequate or, in some cases, non-existent. The City of San Diego must correct this by making a concerted effort to invest in strategies that will help the Black community adapt to climate change and meet our Climate Action Plan goals. This that we should take action by redirecting City dollars to infrastructure projects that reduce greenhouse gas emissions in the community and encouraging Black households and businesses to transition to affordable and clean energy.

Implement and update the climate action plan
(ONGOING/SHORT TERM)

Established the Climate Equity Fund to invest in programs and projects impacting underserved communities

EDUCATION

Partner with school districts to expand workforce development initiatives
(MEDIUM TERM)

Youth Opportunity Pass -- a free bus pass that will give families and students safe options to get to school and work
(MEDIUM TERM)

We must recognize that there can be no recovery without first addressing the needs of children and families in the Black community. Education is a key part of this. Ensuring that the next generation is properly prepared to continue building community should be our priority. From infancy to college, access to programs and educational support need to be increased and sustained. This administration will focus on some of the barriers that exists for some of our youth and families within the Black community, such as transportation, and limited pipeline programming opportunities.

The COVID-19 pandemic has amplified the health disparities in the Black community. These disparities are at no fault of the community, but rather, the generations of inequities perpetuated by our healthcare, housing, economic, and educational systems. While healthcare is not a core function of the City of San Diego, we are committed to doing what we can to address health disparities in the recovery from COVID-19 and beyond. This includes coordinating vaccination events in the Black community, promoting mental health resources, and advocating for disaggregated and detailed public health data to better understand disparities in real time. San Diego's communities should all be safe and healthy. These actions represent the launching pad that will address our disparities.

Statement Condemning Racially Motivated Hate Crimes Against Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders (AAPI)

March 17, 2021

To whom it may concern:

The City of San Diego Human Relations Commission strongly condemns the killing of Asian American and Pacific Islander (AAPI) people at three attacks in the Atlanta area on March 16.

Since the pandemic began a year ago, inflammatory and xenophobic rhetoric has put AAPI persons, families, communities, and businesses at risk. Over the last year we have seen the struggle of AAPI community members who had to not only keep themselves safe from the virus, but also faced increased violence and harassment fueled by prejudice and hatred.

The mission of the Human Relations Commission (HRC) is to promote activities that foster mutual respect and understanding, protect basic human and civil rights, and create an atmosphere that promotes peaceful and harmonious relations among all members of the San Diego community.

Therefore, the HRC strongly condemns extremism and all attacks, violence or hate crimes committed against individuals or groups or property based on the actual or perceived race, religion, gender, sexual orientation, disability, national origin, or ethnicity of the victims.

“Acts of racism against the AAPI community contribute to a climate of intolerance, which harms the fabric of our multicultural society. We believe all people must be treated with fairness, tolerance, and acceptance – and stand in solidarity with our AAPI community, which should be recognized and valued as an integral part of America's ethnic diversity. We encourage the city of San Diego to strengthen its partnership with the AAPI community, and build bridges for understanding and acceptance, and advocate for those who often feel invisible and unheard.” said Shana Hazan, Chair of the Human Relations Commission.

As a Commission, we work to ensure that San Diego is no place for hate. Any attack or violent crime against a member of our community directly contradicts our mission to foster and protect basic human and civil rights and create a safe San Diego for all residents.

Shana Hazan
Chair, San Diego Human Relations Commission

The Human Relations Commission advises the Mayor and City Council on methods to assure that all city residents have equal access to economic, political, and educational opportunities and equal access to service protection and accommodation in all businesses and public agencies.

Human Relations Commission

Mayor Todd Gloria
Civic Center Plaza
San Diego, CA 92101

February 25, 2021

Dear Mayor Gloria,

The Human Relations Commission strongly supports the establishment of an Office of Child and Youth Success within the City of San Diego along with a budget commitment of $350,000 to fund personnel and the development of a Master Plan for Child and Youth Success.

This expression of support comes first and foremost from our collective desire to see San Diego reach its full potential in becoming a City where all who are born, grow up, come of age, and choose to raise a family here can thrive.

We encourage you to follow the lead of other municipalities of similar size and composition which have an Office of Child and Youth Success strategically located within the Mayor's Office. This would enable the City of San Diego to leverage intergovernmental and community partnerships.

The City of San Diego provides many services and support for children, youth, and their families across its multiple departments, and has linkages to other public agencies such as school districts, and child and youth development program providers. However, these efforts would be more effective and cost-efficient with greater coordination.

The proposed office could access technical assistance from the National League of Cities and other similar organizations, while becoming more competitive for state, federal, and foundation grants to support its mission.

The need for an Office of Child and Youth Success is more important than ever as we grapple with how to support the thousands of families whose lives have been upended by the health and economic devastation of COVID.

On behalf of the Human Relations Commission, I would like to express my appreciation for your consideration of our requests. Through the proposed Office of Child and Youth Success, San Diego can make great strides to advance equity and improve the lives of families across our great city.

Sincerely,

Shana Hazan
