Building Permit Timeline

Per SDMC §129.0211, effective Sept. 2024

Application Deemed Complete

Upon receipt of an application, DSD reviews content for basic requirements. When the application is deemed complete, the "clock" for completing the full permit process starts.

First 180 Day Extension

The Chief Building Official is authorized to provide a one-time 180-day extension for the permit process upon determining that the need is due to circumstances beyond the applicant's control.

To be eligible for an extension, the applicant must show that they proceeded in good faith, including timely responses to requests for corrections or missing information.

Permit Utilization

Once the permit is issued, there are timelines for utilization of the permit. Construction must start within a year of permit issuance. To maintain the permit, construction must continue with a valid inspection scheduled at least every 180 days.

730 Days

180 Days

Application in Review

180 Days

Permit Issuance

365 Days

3 Years from Issuance

(single family home/duplex)

4 Years from Issuance
(all other projects)

|------ Pc

Post Permit Issuance

Application Expiration

Most project applications expire if they are not approved after two years, and the file is closed. To proceed with the project, a new application must be submitted.

Second 180 Day Extension

The Chief Building Official may extend an application for an additional period not exceeding 180 days if the project's building standards at the time of submittal are sufficient to protect public health and safety and:

- The additional extension is in the public interest; or
- Circumstances beyond the control of the applicant prevented issuance of the Building Permit

Construction Completion

A Building Permit for work on a single family home or duplex expires three years after issuance. Building Permits for all other projects expire four years after issuance.