

I am bringing a new generation of leadership to local government by putting our neighborhoods first, strengthening fiscal responsibility, and delivering practical solutions.

I was raised in San Ysidro, attended local schools, and graduated from San Diego State University. Today, I live in Otay Mesa with my family. As the son of a single mother, I began working in the fields as a farmworker at a young age. That experience shaped who I am and instilled the values of discipline, resilience, and hard work.

My path in public service began as an intern for Councilmember David Alvarez, and over the past decade, I have served in several roles at city hall. Today, I serve as Chief of Staff to Councilmember Vivian Moreno, overseeing policy, budgets, and neighborhood services.

I understand how decisions in local government affect working families because I have lived those challenges firsthand. I know the cost of living here is among the highest in the nation, and too many families are being squeezed out.

Our community deserves leadership that delivers results, protects taxpayer dollars, and builds a more affordable and sustainable future for all of us.

Join me as we work to build that future together.
