Hi,

Not only was Natis restaurant already a historical place in the hearts of all those that ate there and to those who became friends to all the great people that worked there for decades, but the building itself is a neighborhood treasure!!

It has become a landmark when giving directions, or a good location to meet up with a friend.

The patio, the classic style of the main building, the wrought iron gates, and the adjoining spaces, perfect for small businesses are worth saving!! Not everything has to be “new and shiny” and void of personality. I think this is a building that should be saved for future generations. I just can’t bare any more 2 or 3 story, modern, cement and metal condos going up, or a new age restaurant that serves mediocre health food to further chip away at the wonderful, quirky charm and character that Ocean Beach and the Natis building has always brought to our community.

Ocean Beach is a treasure, and the Natis building one of its jewels!

Kindest regards,
