FACT SHEET ON THE 87TH ALL-STAR GAME

• Major League Baseball and the San Diego Padres will hold the 2016 All-Star Game at Petco Park on July 12, 2016. The 2016 All-Star Game will be the 87th Midsummer Classic.

• It will mark the third time that the Padres have hosted the All-Star Game, having also done so at Jack Murphy Stadium in 1978 and 1992 (named San Diego Stadium in 1978).

July 11, 1978 (The 49th ASG)

• The 1978 Midsummer Classic, which was the 49th Major League Baseball All-Star Game, was played on July 11th at San Diego Stadium. The first pitch was thrown by former President Gerald Ford. After a slow start, the National League emerged with a 7-3 victory. The American League struck for two runs in the top of the first for the early lead, and added a third run in the third with both innings fueled by triples off the bat of Rod Carew. Trailing 3-0 in the bottom of the third, the NL tied the game led by a two-RBI single by Steve Garvey. The game remained tied at 3-3 until the bottom of the eighth inning, when the NL pushed across four runs, started off by a triple from Garvey. The two triples by Carew and the one by Garvey marked the first time that three triples had been hit in a single All-Star Game. The Dodgers’ Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers was named the game’s Most Valuable Player. The game featured 18 future Hall of Famers, including Johnny Bench, George Brett, Rod Carew, Rollie Fingers, Carlton Fisk, Rich Gossage, Reggie Jackson, Tom Lasorda (manager), Joe Morgan, Eddie Murray, Phil Niekro, Jim Palmer, Jim Rice, Tom Seaver, Willie Stargell, Bruce Sutter, Dave Winfield and Carl Yastrzemski.

July 14, 1992 (The 63rd ASG)

• The 1992 Midsummer Classic, which was the 63rd All-Star Game, was held on July 14th at Jack Murphy Stadium. The American League was victorious, 13-6, marking its fifth straight win over the National League. For the AL, Seattle Mariners outfielder Ken Griffey Jr. was named the game’s Most Valuable Player after going 3-for-3 with a home run, double, two RBI and two runs scored, becoming the youngest player to ever win the All-Star MVP award. In addition, Griffey, along with his dad, Ken Sr., became the only father-son duo to both win All-Star Game MVP honors (Ken Sr. won in 1980). The American League also set an All-Star Game record with seven consecutive hits in the first inning. The AL jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the opening frame thanks to RBI singles by Mark McGwire, Cal Ripken Jr. and Griffey — all off NL starter Tom Glavine. The AL never looked back, adding a run in both the second and third innings, four runs in the sixth inning, and three more in the eighth inning. Half of the NL’s runs came on Will Clark’s three-run home run in the eighth inning. The game featured 15 future Hall of Famers, including Roberto Alomar, Craig Biggio, Wade Boggs, Bobby Cox (manager), Dennis Eckersley, Tom Glavine, Tony Gwynn, Greg Maddux, Paul Molitor, Kirby Puckett, Cal Ripken Jr., Ryne Sandberg, Ozzie Smith, John Smoltz and Joe Torre (Coach).

• The Padres have had 94 All-Star selections in franchise history and have had two managers lead an NL squad [Dick Williams – 1985; and Bruce Bochy – 1999].

• The Padres have produced one All-Star Game Most Valuable Player. LaMarr Hoyt won the award in 1985 during his only career All-Star appearance. Hoyt started the game for the NL and tossed 3.0 innings, permitting just two hits.

• The Padres have had three pitchers start an All-Star Game: Randy Jones in 1976 at Philadelphia; LaMarr Hoyt in 1985 at Minneapolis; and Jake Peavy in 2007 at San Francisco.

• Hall of Famer Tony Gwynn owns the most All-Star selections in Padres history with 15 selections. Gwynn scored the winning run of the 1994 Midsummer Classic in the bottom of the 10th inning (below).

The 2015 All-Star Game in Cincinnati was covered by more than 2,000 writers, broadcasters and photographers who provided worldwide coverage of the jewel event. The 86th All-Star Game and the Gillette Home Run Derby presented by Head & Shoulders recorded the best average audience for the two events since 2010. The events averaged a 5.6 HH rating and 9.28 million viewers, an increase of +6% and +8% over last year’s 5.3 HH rating and 8.56 million average. The combined audience marked the first time the events averaged more than nine million viewers since 2010 (9.55 million). ESPN was the most watched prime time network on television during the Derby and the All-Star Game once again led FOX to a win in primetime. As has been the case since its television debut more than 50 years ago, the Major League Baseball All-Star Game ranks as by far the highest-rated All-Star event in sports.

MLB Network’s international transmission of the All-Star Game was broadcast around the world by 51 television and radio networks in 13 languages across more than 16 countries and territories.

The economic impact of recent All-Star Games on its host cities and communities has been as follows:
• In May 2000, construction of the new ballpark began.

• Petco signed a 22-year naming rights deal in 2003.

• Petco hosted its first MLB game on April 8, 2004. The Padres defeated San Francisco, 4-3, in 11 innings in front of 41,400 fans. Brian Giles collected the first hit in the history of the ballpark.

• In the first non-baseball event at Petco, Mexico and Sweden played an International Friendly soccer match.

• The Rolling Stones played the first concert at Petco Park for 43,000 fans on November 11, 2005.

• The semifinals and finals of the inaugural World Baseball Classic (WBC) were hosted at Petco Park from March 18-20, 2006, culminating in a 10-6 Japan victory over Cuba. The WBC would return for second round games in 2009.

• Trevor Hoffman set a new all-time saves record with his 479th save on September 24, 2006 in a 2-1 win over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

• San Francisco Giants hurler Tim Lincecum threw the first and only no-hitter at Petco Park on July 13, 2013.

• The Padres renamed the broadcast section of the press box the “Jerry Coleman Broadcast Center” for Opening Day 2014 at Petco Park in honor of Ford C. Frick winner Jerry Coleman.

• On January 15, 2015, MLB Commissioner Allan H. (Bud) Selig awarded the 2016 All-Star Game to the Padres.

• Prior to the 2015 season, the Padres installed a state-of-the-art high definition video board, measuring 61.2-feet tall by 123.6-feet wide, covering 7,564.32 square feet, the largest in the National League and third-largest in Major League Baseball.

• Petco Park is the first Major League ballpark since Forbes Field in Pittsburgh (closed in 1970) to have a park adjacent to the outfield. The Park at the Park features 2.8 acres of landscaped park beyond the outfield fence, including a video board on the back of the Batter’s Eye, Picnic Hill for lawn seating, a children’s baseball diamond and tot lot play area. It functions as a ticketed area, a special events venue and a neighborhood park.
In 2015, Major League Baseball and the Cincinnati Reds hosted a series of local and national charitable initiatives leading up to the 86th MLB All-Star Game that left a lasting legacy throughout “Reds Country.” This MLB All-Star community effort consisted of projects including nine youth baseball and softball fields, an activity room at a new Boys & Girls Club, a reintegration services center for local veterans and an upgraded waiting room at the Cincinnati Children’s Hospital Medical Center.

$5 million Donation to Local and National Charities
MLB and the Reds donated $5 million through funds raised from Gatorade All-Star Workout Day on Monday, July 13th to MLB All-Star projects throughout “Reds Country” and national charitable initiatives. Since 1997, MLB has donated more than $70 million in All-Star charitable contributions.

MLB All-Star Summer Lasting Legacy Support
2015 MLB All-Star Summer activities supported charitable organizations and initiatives including Boys & Girls Clubs of America, the Jackie Robinson Foundation, Reviving Baseball in Inner Cities (RBI), Stand Up to Cancer, Prostate Cancer Foundation, Starlight Children’s Foundation and Susan G. Komen, among others.

A significant portion of the donation from MLB and the Reds remained in “Reds Country” to fund a number of worthy projects and causes including the following:

MLB Cincinnati Reds Howell All-Star Field (Dayton, OH)
The renovated field serves as both the new home field for Chaminade Julienne High School as well as a location for other local youth baseball programs. The scope of the work included re-grading the field, updating existing outfield fencing, adding a new scoreboard, restoring outdated bleachers, adding an ADA access path and upgrading the press box and concession area. This work allows Chaminade Julienne to have a home field for their varsity and junior varsity teams.

P&G Cincinnati Zoo & Reds Community Fund Community Makeover: Seven Hills Neighborhood Houses, P&G All-Star Park and Dyer All-Star Fields (Cincinnati, OH)
For the past five years, the Reds Community Fund has partnered with Procter & Gamble to create the “Community Makeover” initiative with hundreds of volunteers in one community on one day. MLB’s support during All-Star Week allowed the program to expand dramatically and made this the biggest project to date under this initiative. More than 300 P&G and Cincinnati Zoo volunteers will complete a significant makeover project at the Seven Hills Neighborhood Houses facility with additional work at a large playground space at the vacant Sands School adjacent to the facility and the nearby Dyer Baseball Fields. The work at the community center will feature major HVAC and roofing repairs as well as improvements to the kitchen, library, game room, computer room and other areas. The project at the playground includes a new painted surface, landscaping and a community garden. The work at the Dyer fields includes a new backstop and landscaping upgrades. The overall project will help to revitalize the West End Community and provide a safe and welcoming environment for kids to learn, grow and play baseball. P&G’s investments in the Seven Hills Neighborhood Houses will provide significant and sustainable impact, including reducing annual operating costs and energy usage and investing in the long-term development of the community and its residents.
TVCA Veteran In-Processing (VIP) and Welcome Center (CityLink Center, Cincinnati, OH)
As an extension of Major League Baseball’s Welcome Back Veterans initiative (WelcomeBackVeterans.org), MLB and the Reds, in conjunction with the Tristate Veterans Community Alliance, upgraded an existing space at the CityLink Center to create a new veterans in-processing center. The new center will help some of the thousands of veterans in the Greater Cincinnati area facilitate a successful transition and reintegration into the community through various resources, including financial planning, job readiness, peer coaches and referrals to qualified community organizations/services based on the needs of the veteran and his or her family.

Cincinnati Children’s Hospital Waiting Room Unveil/Starlight Fun Center Donation (Cincinnati, OH)
The project resulted in significant improvements to the waiting room of the Pediatric Primary Care Center (PPC), which offers care annually to thousands of children from low-income families. The renovation included innovative physical and virtual spaces designed to engage families with leading community organizations in order to help mitigate any potential social risks and also offer opportunities and resources to achieve their health goals. Additionally, MLB and the Reds, in partnership with Starlight Children’s Foundation, will donate a new Fun Center mobile entertainment unit, containing the latest gaming system that rolls bedside in hospitals to provide entertainment and therapeutic play for pediatric patients at the Cincinnati Children’s Hospital.

MLB Cincinnati Meinken All-Star Field (Covington, KY)
The modifications to the field included building a full synthetic field, upgrades to an outdated scoreboard, refinshed previously dilapidated fencing and netting, new batting cages, and dugout and lighting renovations. The City of Covington plays a major role in youth baseball and softball in Northern Kentucky. Meinken Baseball Field is home to Holy Cross High School, Holmes High School and Crosstown Youth Baseball.

Boys & Girls Club Activity Room Dedication, Sheakley Boys & Girls Club (Cincinnati, OH)
Major League Baseball and the Cincinnati Reds have contributed toward the construction of a new facility for the Boys & Girls Clubs of Greater Cincinnati, which is in the Price Hill neighborhood. All-Star Community Legacy dollars have directly funded an activity center at the new 17,000 square foot facility. The new activity center includes a multi-sport surface, batting cages and bleacher seating, among other features. The new space will allow the Club to double the amount of young people they currently serve.
