San Ysidro Port of Entry District Wayfinding Directional Signs: Feasibility Study

March 2015

Project Description

The Port of Entry District has undergone significant changes with the Land Port of Entry (LPOE) reconfiguration and supports 8 million annual pedestrians crossing the border, with projected growth to 12 million by 2030. Because of the changes in pedestrian access at the LPOE and the significant community interest in directional signs at the border, it is recommended to implement a wayfinding program within the Port of Entry District in the immediate future to serve one of the region's busiest pedestrian districts. In addition, pursuing a wayfinding program at this location will compliment the new LPOE. The demand on pedestrian infrastructure is significant and implementing a unified sign program in the District will help visitors, commuters, and residents orient themselves and help them find local services, transit and other facilities safely and more efficiently. The study proposes to locate twelve (12) directional signs at various locations with the Port of Entry District.

Right-of-way Acquisition & Environmental Clearance

No right of way acquisition will be required. Signs will be located within the right of way through an Encroachment Maintenance & Removal Agreement (EMRA) or similar permitting process as determined by the City of San Diego Development Services Department. Likewise, the environmental clearance will be determined through the permitting phase of the project. Figure: San Ysidro Wayfinding Signage – Proposed Locations provides preliminary locations of twelve (12) directional signs within the Port of Entry District. The locations selected were determined based on:

- City staff site visits to the area;
- The location of existing and future transit facilities;
- The location of existing and future pedestrian crossings;
- Documented patterns for pedestrian travel;

The final location of directional signs will require vetting with the community through the permitting phase of development.

Final Design

Refer to Figure: Wayfinding Signs Design for examples of the look and feel of the directional signs. A combination of interpretive signs, directory signs, directional sign, and community directional signs will be used. In addition, the draft San Ysidro Community Plan Urban Design Element Section 4.11 Wayfinding includes further examples and policy direction for a communitywide wayfinding program. The communitywide wayfinding includes neighborhood branding and signs for all mode users. The community was engaged in the initial design of the signs through this effort. Once funding is available for construction of the signs, further public outreach regarding the placement and final design will be shared with the community during the permitting phase of the project.

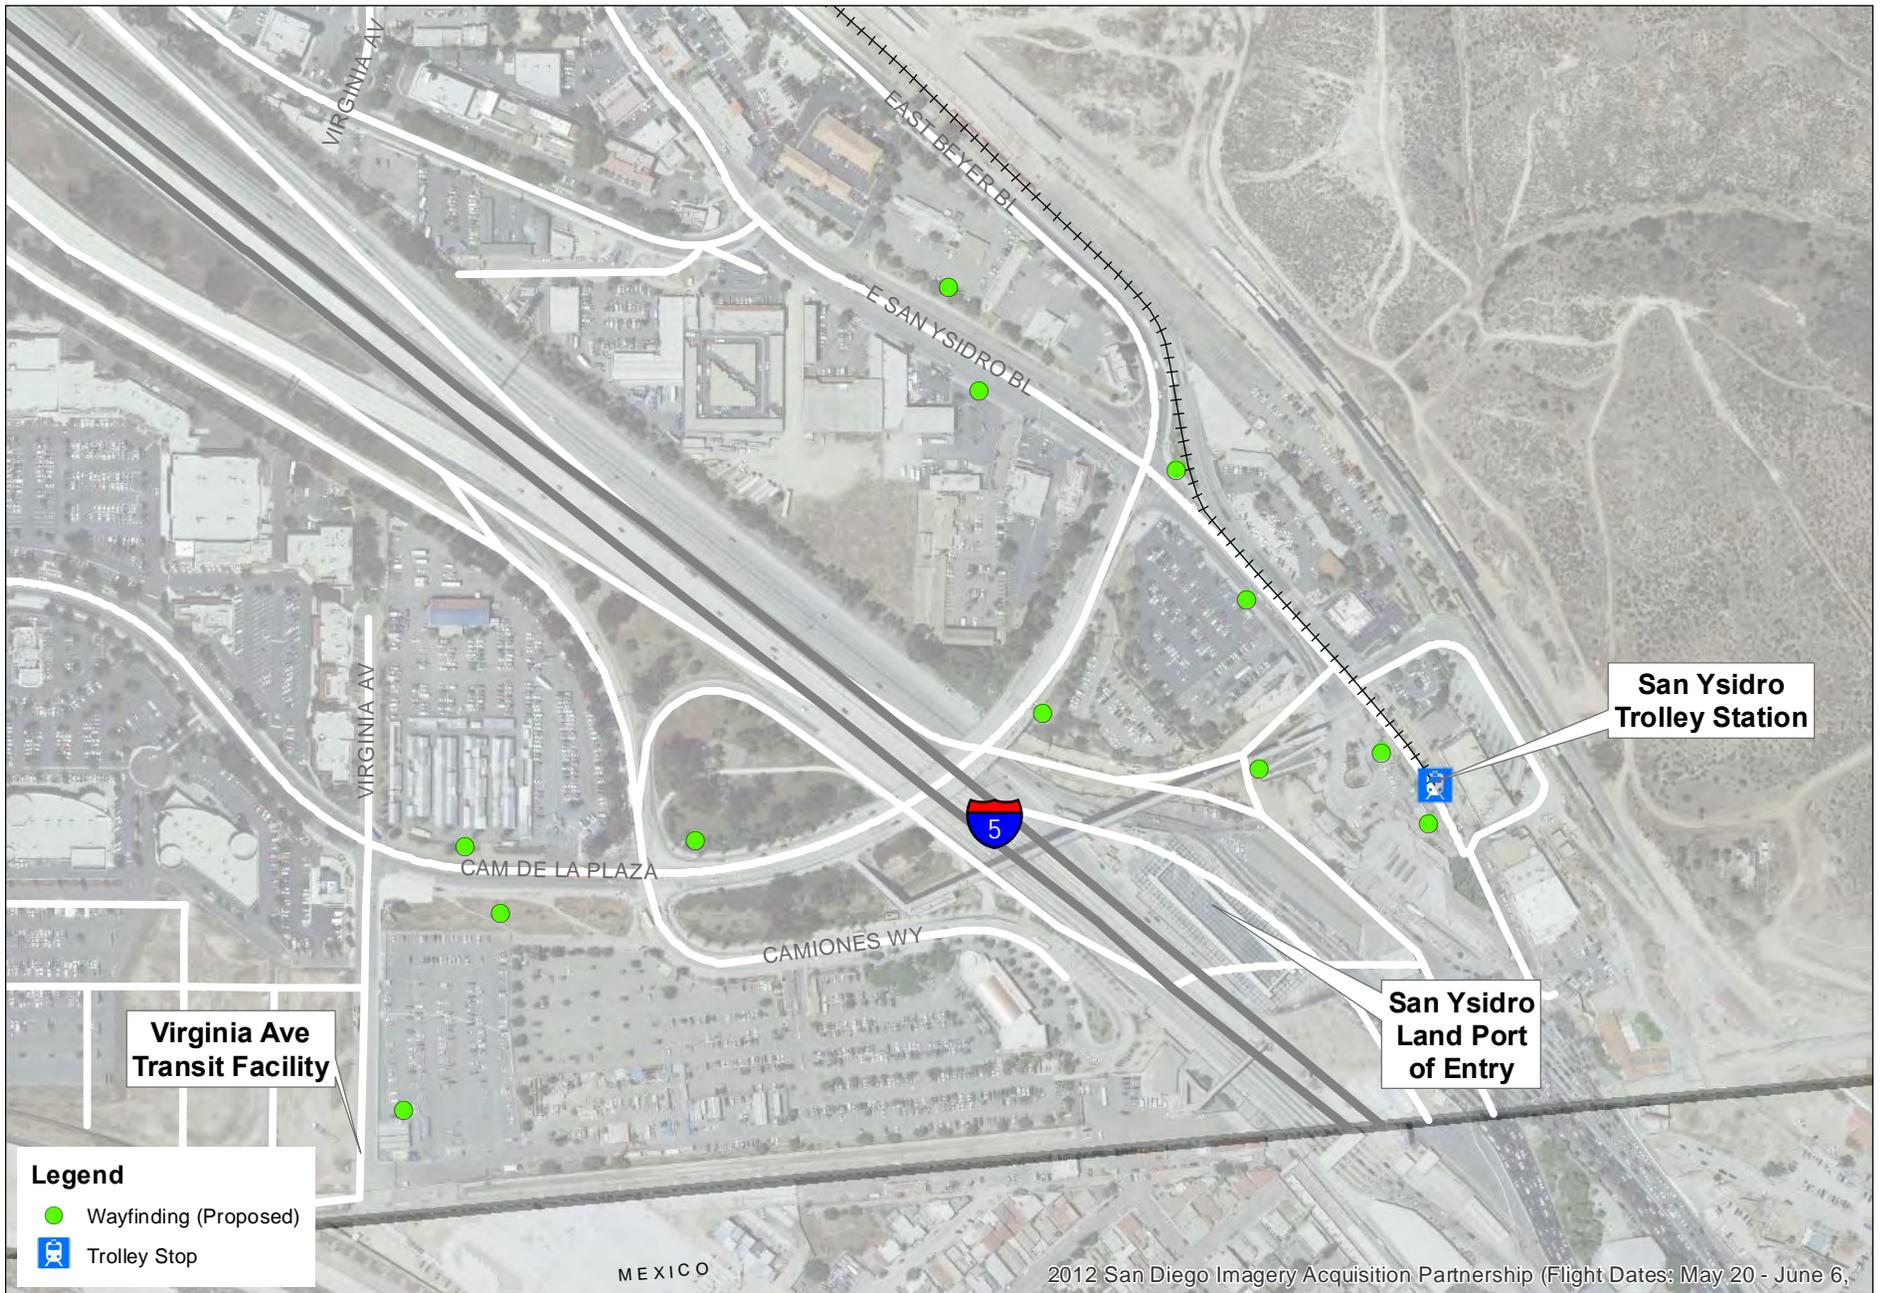

Outreach & Local Commitment

The Port of Entry District in San Ysidro is undergoing a huge transformation with the reconfiguration of the LPOE at the international border. Through the public outreach for the San Ysidro Community Plan Update residents, businesses, visitors and commuters have expressed the need for better pedestrian infrastructure, including a cohesive sign program, to improve the border area's mobility and make it more attractive, safer, and easier to navigate. The community supports the efforts within the plan update to develop a wayfinding program. The Urban Design Element of the draft community plan provides policy direction and outlines a comprehensive wayfinding program which includes iconic gateway signs, neighborhood markers, freeway directional signs, and pedestrians/bicyclist directional signs.

The community plan update has been a five year public process and outreach consists of residents, students, business owners, employees, local non-profits, and regional, state and federal governmental agencies. In addition, the demand on pedestrian infrastructure is significant in the (LPOE) District which is documented by multiple planning studies, including the Mobility Study for the San Ysidro community plan update, the recently completed Border Health Equity Transportation Study, the 2010 San Ysidro Port of Entry Reconfiguration Mobility Study and the 2009 San Ysidro Mobility Strategy. All of these studies included significant public participation and outreach.
