New Library Database, Vault Career Library, Helps Job Seekers

Includes downloadable career guides, job hunting resources, discussion forum, and more

SAN DIEGO –The San Diego Public Library has recently added a new database service, Vault Career Library, to its online electronic resources for Library patrons and users.

The new service offers comprehensive career resources for job researchers of all ages and levels of experience. It features many online career and industry books, and also includes exclusive information on more than 3,000 companies, career advice articles, and unique message boards.

“Library users now can learn about and make solid career or job choices online for free, just by using their San Diego Public Library card” said Director Deborah Barrow. “Whether it is for personal career research, or finding or changing a job in these hard economic times, this new online service is one of many innovative electronic tools the San Diego Public Library is making available to patrons to help them fulfill their personal life and work goals.”

The new service is available to Library card holders from within the libraries, and from their home/work/remote computers.
