CENTRAL LIBRARY HOSTS HYBRID AUTHOR TALK/ WORKSHOP ABOUT BEING A WRITER WHO WRITES

Offers How-to Advice & Exploration of the Practicalities of Writing and the Creative Process

SAN DIEGO – The City of San Diego Public Library will host an author talk featuring San Diego author Judy Reeves and her newly revised book, A Writer's Book of Days, on Monday, November 15, 2010 at 6:30 p.m. in the Wangenheim Room--3rd floor of the Central Library, located at 820 E Street in downtown San Diego. This event is free and open to the public.

A Writer's Book of Days is a holistic approach to being a writer that encompasses the physical, emotional, and spiritual as well as the creative aspects of writing. Evocative daily writing prompts - culled from hundreds of writing workshops - opens the door to the creative process and better writing. To create new or enhance existing stories, poems, or writing of any kind, all one has to do is set a date for writing practice, open a notebook, and begin writing. Be sure to bring a pen and pad for Judy's on-the-spot writing exercise (don't worry; it will be fun).

Judy Reeves is also the author of The Writer's Retreat Kit, Writing Alone, Writing Together; and A Creative Writer's Kit, and has been a featured columnist and editor. She currently teaches writing and leads creativity workshops. In her 20 years of experience as a workshop leader, Judy has conducted workshops at a number of conferences, including San Diego State University Writers' Conference and Southern California Writers' Conference.
